> The curiosity of some of the fair sex having been aroused by sundry inadereferences that had been quate dropped during the day to the organization and purposes of the proposed bureau of chivalry, it was naturally expected that the matter would be explained in full at the banquet. The members of the Bachelor club were somewhat divided as to how much of their plans on this score should be made public. It had at first been thought advisable to wait until the banquet and then to make a general annoancement, for, to be effective, the purposes of the bareau ought to be known to those who would require the services of the professional escorts which it would supply. But some members thought this would bring unpleasant publicity at the present personal stage of the proceedings, and that it would be best for the members to drop appropriate hints while making their New Year's calls. But the experience of Mr. Emmet Keene in divulging the matter seemed to have been the experience of nearly all who had essayed the embarrassing task. Nor had the general embarrassment of the situation visibly decreased by the time the coffee had been reached that New Year's night. Ex-Alderman Samuel Hiller, as a ready speaker, was urged by those near him at table to divulge the details of the club's mysterious plan. But in a speech that was considered felicitous, he referred the whole matter to the originater of the plan, "to the esteemed and confirmed member of our club, Gen. Friesbie Wiggins." That gentleman appeared to be visibly affected by the task confronting him. He stamclub, it grieves me"-he checked him-self and looked hastily at Mrs. Bloom at his side, whose natural color was heightened to that of a peony, "that is to say, it gives me pleasure." He paused again, this time to wipe the gathering beads of perspiration from his forehead. Drawing himself together, he started again: "As the poet said, the best laid plans of mice and men-Well, the fact is, boys, the plan has its drawbacks. I've talked it over with Mrs. Bloom, and she says that as far as the personal element is after me herself-or, that is to say," but he never got farther, and fell back partment and police court, a fire stainto his chair amid vociferous cries of "traitor!" and the enthusiastic epause of the fair sex.

PANAMA CANAL BILL SIGNED.

It Was the First Law Created By the Present Congress-Cannt Bonds.

Washington, Dec. 23.-President Recovered has staned the bill passed by law created by the present congress. Secretary Shaw states that, although the Panama canal bill perfected the legislation relating to the sale of Panama bonds and makes it possible to issue them at any time, the treasury department does not contemplate an immediate issue. At present conditions for an issue are not as favorable as they are likely to be later on. An immediate sale would withdraw money from channels of trade where it is now needed to the amount of the issue.
